To Participate In Army-Navy Pennant Award Ceremony

Col. Robert T. Stevens
CHIEF OF CLOTHING AND TEXTILE BR.
PROCUREMENT DIVISION, O.Q.M.G.

Col. Stevens will formally present the Army-Navy "E" Pennant to Mr. Herman Cone for Proximity Manufacturing Company and Revolution Cotton Mills on Friday, May 14th

Major Hugh O. Clark, Jr.

Public Relations Officer of the Charlotte Quartermaster Depot who represents Under Secretary of War Patterson in handling arrangements for the Army-Navy Production Award to Proximity Manufacturing Company and Revolution Cotton Mills.

Mrs. R. E. Sims Presented Life Membership Pin

As a special feature of the Easter morning service, at Proximity Methodist church, Mrs. R. E. Sims was presented an Honorary Life Membership Pin of the Woman's Society of Christian Service. The president of the local society, Mrs. J. D. Whitt, made the presentation which was a complete surprise to Mrs. Sims. Mrs. Sims has been a member of the Woman's organization for the past thirty years, and although, not able to attend its meetings regularly, for business reasons, has contributed both prayers and money to its projects. The W.S.C.S. of Proximity Methodist church is proud of her record and glad to do honor to her. As another expression of appreciation of faithful service and interest; the pastor, acting for the Pauline Wooley Bible class, presented Mrs. Sims a beautiful potted Easter Lily which had been placed in the church in memory of Mrs. Sims' husband, the late Mr. R. E. Sims, who was for years a much loved teacher of the class.

The flowers added to the worship in the church during the service and was later taken by the family and placed on the grave of Mr. Sims.

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

For the next few months business men will find developments here of great interest and significance in the conduct of their operations. In addition to the heavy schedule of legislation before the 78th Congress, there are many executive moves afoot that have a very direct bearing on industrial problems.

Some of the bills before Congress stem from the determination of lawmakers to halt the encroachment of the bureaucrats upon the constitutional prerogatives of the legislative branch. Some involve fundamental human liberties. Some have to do with labor's lapse in sense of responsibility, and a great many are concerned with economic stabilization and inflation.

Still under fire is the compulsory work draft measure known as the Austin-Wadsworth Bill (S-666—H.R. 1742). The National Association of Manufacturers has expressed vigorous opposition to such a measure. Labor is fighting it. Manpower officials in the government say it is not necessary now. Members of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees, before whom hearings on this bill are still in progress, have been deeply impressed by this opposition.

The Maloney Bill (S. 885), the purpose of which is to create an independent Civilian Supply Agency, is now under consideration by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. NAM has advised this body that while the Association favors a strong voice for the civilian economy it does not approve the plan to create an autonomous organization outside the War Production Board. There has been some indication that this bill may be altered somewhat to meet the objections advanced by WPB Chairman Donald Nelson and other opponents of the measure.

One of the revisions under discussion involves the elevation of the WPB's Office of Civilian Supply Director to membership on the War Production Board. Chairman Nelson took cognizance of growing demands for greater protection of the civilian economy by appointing a full Vice-Chairman of WPB in charge of civilian requirements.

A bill which would create an office of Scientific and Technical Mobilization, sponsored by Senator Harley M. Kilgore, is now before the Senate Military Affairs Committee. This measure, in the opinion of some of its Congressional opponents, would create in the person of the Administrator the most powerful bureaucrat in Washington and would have the effect of sanctioning the compulsory licensing of patents.

These foes of the measure point out that it could be used to bring about a compulsory pooling of industrial "know-how," manufacturing techniques, and technical information, and give the government broad control over private property which would fall under the bill's definition of "scientific and technical facilities."

Pennington, Ernest Sawyer, J. S. Phipps, A. P. Dickson, J. F. Walker, H. Pennington, and Misses Anna Motz, Agnes Matthews, Fannie Ivey, Lillia Tilley, and Minnie Fields.

The following letter was recently received from Mr. Frank L. Walton, Director Textile Clothing and Leather Division of the War Production Board.

This letter should remove the confusion from the minds of many serving in the textile industry who have wondered whether their work is considered essential to the war effort.

To Members of The Cotton Textile Industry:

The Cotton Yarn and Fabric Mills have been classified by the War Manpower Commission as an essential industry. The Selective Service System Activity and Occupation Bulletin No. 20, dated April 5, 1943, is now in the hands of the local draft boards.

The Essential Activity, "Production of Textiles," has been broadened to include all fabrics and yarns "for civilian as well as military and industrial use." This means that whether you are making military or civilian yarns or fabrics, your product is vital to the War Effort.

The War Production Board has declared fabrics and yarns essential and has asked each mill for the full production capacity of each plant, either on a 48-hour, three shift schedule or other schedules consistent with the maximum machinery capacity of the plant.

Our fighting men must be adequately clothed. Our men and women who are working day and night to produce ships, planes, tanks, arms, food and clothing for our fighting forces must also be clothed. More fabrics for sand bags, food bags, tents, and thousands of military or essential civilian uses must be supplied.

Cotton mills can be justly proud of the job that was done in 1942. All the military needs were met and essential civilian requirements were supplied. We need more production in 1943. Idle machinery and absenteeism do not win the war—they delay victory and cost additional lives. We should all fight as hard on the home front as our boys are fighting on the war front.

We hope you can step up your production. How much will you help?

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Frank L. Walton

What Are You Doing
Are you retarding the war effort or are you buying all the War Bonds you can regularly?

Your future prosperity depends on your purchases of War Bonds regularly and under the payroll savings plan.

Are You Behind Them

War Bonds are the fighting man's guarantee that the folks back home stand solidly behind him.

Greensboro, North Carolina, Friday, May 7, 1943

Preparations for May 14

The Textorian is happy to announce that plans are rapidly progressing for the Army-Navy 'E' presentation ceremonies next Friday. We feel that this will be an occasion that all of us will long remember. We feel that the occasion will bring home to us more than before the responsibility that each and every one of us must bear in order to preserve for all of us the freedoms we cherish so highly.

As we rapidly approach May 14, your editor would like to suggest that we all take inventory of ourselves and determine for ourselves, not for anyone else, whether or not we can contribute even more toward the war effort. We might ask ourselves whether we are doing the very best that we can in helping to get out a maximum production of the goods that we manufacture, the goods the Government badly needs in larger and larger quantities to properly equip our fighting forces. We might inquire as to whether or not our attendance records on the job could not be better. We might ask ourselves whether we could not cooperate with others a little better that we all might collectively contribute more to the war effort. In other words, we suggest that we all do some serious self-inspection, for we have been told by very wise men that at a time when a person is being recognized because of accomplishment or being honored because of exceptional ability that is the time that it is best for him to begin to take inventory of himself.

We are all being honored for splendid performance in the past. Let us now prepare ourselves for greater achievements.

The Tax Puzzle

It now appears as if the complicated congressional tax proposal puzzle will soon be solved and the American people will have some idea as to how to plan for the future. In looking back over the congressional wrangles, we now feel less critical than we did several weeks back. In other words, we must recognize the fact that in a democracy we must expect a certain amount of ineffective, muddled confusion, particularly when such major issues as methods and amounts of taxation are involved.

It is far better to have a system which permits, or we might say tolerates, such lack of inefficiency as was evident during at least part of the congressional proceedings than to have a system which permits some one person, such as a dictator, to issue edicts in respect to matters of taxes and others of vital importance.

We hope that the tax measure which will soon come out of Congress will be the fairest and best for the general welfare of the entire nation. We feel sure that it will be a better measure than any which would have emanated from a Fascist government.

QUIZ FOR DRIVERS

BY J. E. WINCHESTER—AUTOMOTIVE SUPERINTENDENT 1939 MARKETERS

Answers to Quiz for Drivers

A—John R. Cobb in his Raiton Red Lion drove one mile from a fast start at 368.9 MPH on August 23, 1939. This will probably stand longer than any speed record as this competition has been discontinued for the duration.
A—Of 41,000 drivers in motor vehicle accidents, 38,500 or 94% were males.
A—No. An odometer is the portion of the speedometer which measures miles traveled.

SPEAKING OF HEALTH

By DR. VICTOR G. HEISER

Medical Consultant Nation Association of Manufacturers

EMPTY COUNTERS AND HOPEFUL HEARTS

Men and women are affected by many aches and pains. Not the least among these are footaches. These complaints are found among men and women—and children too—of all ages, in all parts of the country. They may be minor troubles, such as corns and flat feet which do not interfere much with the daily tasks. Or the footaches may be of such a severe nature that they seriously restrict physical activities.

During the first World War, the Surgeon General of the U. S. Army reported 15 per cent of the draftees were found to have foot defects which rendered 2 per cent of them unfit for service. What is the story now? The present Selective Service Board physical examinations again reveal that foot defects rate high. The number of young men rejected has reached 4 per cent, perhaps in part because of the more thorough examinations. Those found with major foot defects total 145 out of every 1,000 men examined, or about one out of every 7. These are indeed startling figures. If older men were examined, and if such examinations extended to women as well, the figures would be even more marked.

Causes

Foot defects and footaches are the direct result of several causes. In many cases the bones, ligaments, and muscles are not freely able to support the weight of the individual. This is more apt to be true in the case of men and women who are overweight, though thin and underweight persons are not immune. Also, the human foot has been badly abused by the wearing of improperly fitting shoes. Common complaints resulting from these and other causes include corns, toes jammed or crowded, bunions, toes over-riding, displacement of the great toes, ingrowing nails, hammer toes, callosities, markedly flat and misshapen feet. The latter result from displacement of bones or relapse due to weakening of muscles and ligaments. And, of course, combinations of two or more of these defects are common. The result is much discomfort, disability, and actual pains and aches not only in the feet and legs, but in other parts of the body as well. These are high prices to pay for the pleasure, if pleasure it is, of wearing badly fitting shoes.

Footaches are especially serious these days. With many millions of women drawn into industry, and the many more millions of men on the production and fighting fronts, such footaches can and do seriously interfere with production schedules. The wearing of sensible and properly fitting shoes will help to relieve pains, will result in the reduction of accidents due to slipping and tripping, and above all will aid in the war effort.

Experience: What you usually get when you're looking for something else.

Three absent-minded professors were so absorbed in conversation that they didn't hear the train come in nor hear the conductor's "All aboard" until the puff of the engine attracted them. Then they all rushed for the train and two scrambled on it. The third looked on sheepishly.

The agent, standing nearby, offered consolation. "Too bad, mister. But two out of three made it—that's pretty good."

"Yes," sighed the professor, still looking wistfully after the train. "But those two came down to see me off."

Little Algermon (to the old lady who had just arrived, and whom he had never seen before): "So you're my grandmother, are you?"
Old Lady: "Yes, on your father's side."

Algermon: "Well, you're on the wrong side; I'll tell you that right now."

"Whenever I look at you," said the young man to his girl, "I think of those marvelous glamour girls you see in the pictures."

"Do you really?" asked his girl highly gratified.

"Yes, but what's the good? A guy like me has to be satisfied with what he can get!"

Two soldiers standing on a Berlin street corner watched an attractive well-dressed woman walk by.

"How beautiful!" said one storm trooper. "How elegant!"

"Why not?" replied the other. "She's a captain's wife. Her hat came from Paris, her gloves from Norway, her shoes from Belgium."

"But nothing from Russia?"
"Oh, yes. From Russia came her mourning veil."

1. Less popular than they should be, pork feet (and even the tail) can be utilized as a meat "extender." They make a delicious scrapple with corn meal. Use a recipe given in one of your best cook books.

2. It's the simple trick of preparing a meal-in-one dish! Fit scrubbed and scraped carrots (small, whole ones) into loaf baking dish. Smother with a good wartime meat loaf mixture and bake as usual.

3. There's a tasty noodle sauce made this way: Use 2 cups of any canned vegetable juices you have reserved in the refrigerator. Melt 3 tablespoons margarine and blend in 3 tablespoons flour. Add vegetable juice. Cook over low gas flame until thick. Stir while cooking. Pour over cooked noodles and heap with rich brown toasty bread crumbs.

Reading & Writing

by Edwin Seaver & Robin McKown

The latest addition to the ranks of Book-of-the-Month Club authors is Mark Aldanov, whose novel "The Fifth Seal" is the Club's May selection.

Aldanov was born in Kiev, Russia, in 1889. His family was wealthy and he had the advantage of a fine education and of wide travel. When his formal education was completed, he had two degrees from the University of St. Petersburg, one in law and the other in chemical engineering. A year before the First World War, in 1913, his first book appeared: "The Enigma of Tolstoy." In 1920 he moved to Paris where he wrote a number of novels which were translated into many languages.

He began work on "The Fifth Seal" in 1937. Parts of it appeared in a Russian quarterly magazine published in France. Two days before the Germans entered Paris, Aldanov and his wife left for America where they now live. "The Fifth Seal" was finished in New York in 1942.

This might be characterized as a novel about the decay of European society just prior to the present war. So enthusiastic were the four judges of the Book-of-the-Month Club about Aldanov's novel, that each of them wrote a report on it for the current Book-of-the-Month Club News. Here are some of their comments:

Dr. Henry Seidel Canby, chairman of the committee, writes, "It is the kind of novel which is perhaps hardest to find in contemporary fiction—an ironical, humorous, poignant novel of character." And novelist Dorothy Canfield Fisher: "The special joy for me in the rich feast spread out in 'The Fifth Seal' is the series of portraits... Looking back at them, I find it hard to believe that the subjects are the imaginary figures of a novel, not actual historical personages."

Christopher Morley, novelist and belle-lettist, comments: "From each of his characters Mr. Aldanov expresses the most frolisome juices of vintage comedy." And William Allen White: "It has a new squint at modern life. This originality—aside from the uncanny characterization—is the main ground on which I should recommend it to the average reader."

When the Japanese invaded the Aleutian Islands, native inhabitants of the bare, windswept country were hurriedly transported to the mainland to get them out of the danger zone. Many of them according to Joseph Driscoll, author of "War Discovers Alaska," complained that their new home had too many trees and not enough room to walk around in.

"Do you know what a tree is?" Driscoll asked one of the youngsters. "Sure," answered the boy. "A tree is a stick with grass on it." "Did you ever see a tree before?" Driscoll continued. "Sure," said the boy. "At Christmas time. Christmas trees our teachers bought for us." "Christmas trees?" repeated Driscoll. "Where did you get Christmas trees?" The boy beamed. "From Sears Roebuck," he said.

Maid of Cotton Dramatizes Cottons

Cotton has a new queen—and one particularly qualified to represent it. Chosen over ten finalists in the fifth Maid of Cotton contest, the new Maid of Cotton is blonde, twenty-two-year-old Bonnie Beth Byler. Hailing from Lepanto, Arkansas, in the heart of the cotton belt, Bonnie Beth comes by her title more naturally than even her predecessors because she owns a 300-acre cotton farm and comes from a long line of cotton farmers.

Following her formal introduction by the fashion director of the Cotton-Textile Institute and the National Cotton Council, two of her sponsors at the Chicago Wash Apparel Show, the new Maid has started a 16,000-mile tour of the country to appear at stores to give consumers ideas on how to make and keep up a smart, year-round, wartime wardrobe of cottons. Week-ends she'll spend at training centers entertaining the men in the service.

All Bonnie's clothes, her personal wardrobe for camp visits, travel and press interviews as well as the one she wears at fashion shows in the piece goods departments of stores, are made of American grown and woven cottons. She's going to be on the road so much that she needs two suits. One is a new cotton sport tweed in blue, cream and brown, with a matching hat which she wears with a royal blue broadcloth blouse, bag and shoes in the same shade of cotton gabardine. The other suit is a glen plaid in a lighter weight tweed—a perfect traveler and camp follower for warm days. Both suits are easy to launder, but hard to soil.

Cotton Evening Gowns
To captivate her camp audiences, Bonnie has two evening dresses, one a coquettish pink lace which sets off her blonde beauty—the other a sweetheart of a dress made of the new glazed gingham in red and white checks with ruffles of the same outlining hearts at the hem.

Postwar Changes Will Be Evolutionary Rather Than Revolutionary

Hundreds of Companies, Studying Plans to Provide Full Employment Recognize Their Responsibilities

New York, N. Y., May 7—Although the nation's manufacturers are planning for new and improved products after the war, the postwar world will not be spectacularly changed, according to a cross-sectional report of the postwar plans of industrial companies, published by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Based on responses to a questionnaire and on letters and interviews, the NAM report, "Peacetime Plans of Industrial Companies," shows that changes in postwar products will be evolutionary rather than revolutionary.

"Almost every manufacturer is dreaming new products and new improvements," and hundreds of companies have launched peacetime planning programs for the study of means of providing full employment, the report showed. "Manufacturers recognize their responsibility for re-employment of former workers, and fulfilling that responsibility is one of the major objectives . . .

"Industrial management is proud of its war production record, and it recognizes an opportunity to merit the same public approbation in the peacetime era by developing sound postwar plans now."

Changes Will Be Gradual
While developments in the fields of plastics, light metals, and other new or relatively new materials and designs will result in changes in peacetime products, the report shows that many manufacturers fear that the public has been "over-sold" on the prospects of revolutionary changes.

It was pointed out that "for the most part new materials come into use as products now on hand are replaced. Iron and enameled pots and pans, for instance, remained in vogue for a generation after aluminum and stainless steel utensils were available to all who wished to buy. Nylon for full-fashioned hosiery probably came in faster than any other new material ever did, yet when nylon products were turned to war, more than two thirds of all full-fashioned hosiery was still made of materials other than nylon." Consequently, it is predicted, although plastics and other synthetic materials will be of far reaching importance in post-war America, "the changes will come gradually rather than overnight."

Postwar Views
In the foreword of the report the NAM points out that peacetime planning must to a large extent await Congressional action on national policies which will determine such factors as taxes, disposition of government-owned plants, termination of government contracts, rate of demobilization of the armed forces, tariff, securities, and labor legislation.

Briefly, some views which NAM found management holding on post-war subjects are: Many women will voluntarily leave jobs to return to their homes after the war. With technological advances changing many factory jobs during the war, returning men will have to learn new skills. Distribution will offer one of the greatest fields for post-war advancement as production costs are much nearer rock-bottom than distribution costs. Consumer needs will change as the population redistributes itself geographically. Relatively more manufacturing will be done in decentralized areas.

The Kitchen Front

NO one can afford to waste the least bit of food these days. Take the white potato as an example. Careless thick peeling is exceedingly wasteful; soaking peeled potatoes in cold water and boiling in a quantity of water causes loss of minerals and vitamins.

Insure your potatoes against such losses by scrubbing them with a brush and then cooking them in the skins. And use the "low-water" method, doing the cooking in a tightly covered fairly heavy utensil. Once the water starts to boil, immediately turn the top gas burner to its controlled simmer flame which will remain at this exact point for the entire cooking period.

Escort-Ship Program Pushed To Meet Submarine Threat

Destroyer-escort ships are the answer to Hitler's submarine packs which are slashing at the lifelines that join the American production front and the Allied battlefronts all over the world.

U-boat sinkings are causing us grave losses in ships, men and war materials. With this undersea scourge, the Nazis hope to break or curb the offensive power of the United Nations. With it they hope to snatch victory out of the jaws of looming defeat. For the enemy knows that regardless of the volume of production achieved by the Arsenal of Democracy, it will be worse than useless at the bottom of the seas.

It is estimated that Germany is now building submarines approximately twice as fast as we sink them. Hitler is staking everything on this all-out submarine campaign. For a year or more, he has been using all available shipbuilding facilities in Germany for U-boat construction.

To clear the sea-lanes of these murderous raiders we need anti-submarine vessels in large numbers. We need submarine killers, built with only this thought in mind. That is what the destroyer-escort ship is. It is fast, streamlined, seaworthy, and fitted with the deadliest armament ever mounted on a ship its size. Equally important, it can be built rapidly, by mass production methods, and in many shipyards not equipped to construct larger warships.

"It's smaller than today's destroyer, it's steel, and it carries weapons against aircraft and submarines" is a succinct description of the escort.

Offensively—and the escort ship is strictly designed for attack—it can maneuver more rapidly than most other ocean-going craft and can more than match the submarine's best underwater speed.

The mission of the escort ship is to shepherd our convoys safely to their destinations, thus relieving other units of the Fleet for vital duties elsewhere. Aggressive in every sense, these little ships are able to deal instantaneously and effectively with attack from any quarter, including the air. At the first hint of danger to the cargo vessels they are protecting, they dash out to meet the lurking U-boats.

Armament includes guns heavy enough to enable her to shoot it out with submarines on the surface, anti-aircraft guns of various caliber, depth charges for anti-submarine work, and torpedo tubes to deal with the threat of surface raiders.

Although the escorts will be similar in general characteristics, they will be constructed in two lengths. The large hull is slightly more than 300 feet long, and the small slightly less. The beam is 35 or 36 feet. Diesel electric, turbo-electric drives, diesel geared and turbine geared engines are used for motive power in the current models, though it is planned to standardize the propelling machinery as soon as output of such equipment from the factories reaches a point where enough engines of the preferred type can be provided for the escort program. At present it is not possible to equip all the ships with the same engines. When running at reserve speed, the escort has enough reserve power for the maneuvers of convoy protection and the demands of a submarine chase.

The destroyer-escort program is designed to provide direct protection for our supply lines which now extend clear around the globe—for laden merchant ships in transit across the North Atlantic and through the Arctic Ocean to Murmansk, to the Mediterranean, to the Middle East around the Cape, to the South Pacific. Our problem becomes relatively greater and more urgent as more men and guns have to be carried further to our fronts.

To meet the crisis, to curtail the waste of precious cargoes, destruction of vital ships and losses of heroic crews, we must sink Hitler's subs faster than they can be built. We must have escort ships, more escort ships and yet more escort ships. And it is not enough merely to build and launch these vessels quickly—they must also be fitted and put into service with the utmost speed.

In other words, it is just as important to have the component parts ready to install in the ship as to have the hull built on time. No escort ship

We must exert ourselves to the utmost to get this equipment out. We must reduce to a minimum all production losses due to absenteeism, accidents, work spoilage, carelessness. Every minute counts. Nothing must be allowed to slow up these vital components.

WITH rationing and shortages and demands on the budget, who isn't glad to get a main course idea that "rings the bell" with everyone? Proper nourishment for the family is a vital part of our work today—but we mustn't forget appetite appeal, too. Here's a dish that meets all requirements.

CASSEROLE OF OYSTERS AND RICE

1½ to 2 dozen medium oysters
Milk
2 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper
3 cups hot cooked rice

Drain the oysters and pick them over for bits of shell. Strain the liquid and measure it. Measure enough milk to make a total of 2½ cups of liquid in all. Melt the butter in a double boiler, add the flour and mix well. Add the milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Stir in the oyster liquid and season with salt and pepper. Put a third of the rice in the bottom of a buttered baking dish. Cover with half of the oysters, sprinkle with salt and pepper and pour on a third of the sauce. Repeat and top with the remaining third of the rice and the remaining sauce. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) for about 20 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Six servings.

Mrs. A. L. Link of High Point, spent the day yesterday with her brother, C. M. Crawford of White Oak.

Misses Jeannette Johnson and Grace Ammons spent the week end visiting in Rockingham.

Mr. Sydney M. Cone, Jr., Print Works, is spending a few days in Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. John Harris and family motored to Summerfield yesterday to visit friends.

Mr. T. S. Horry had the misfortune of having to put his Chevrolet Coupe in Cobl's hospital to have some repairs.

THREE HIGHLY IMPORTANT MISSIONS WHICH PAVED THE WAY for the Allied landings in North Africa were entrusted to the British submarine crew shown in this picture. The first was important reconnaissance of the Algerian coast in preparation for the Allied landings. The second job was to land, and later re-embark, the secret mission of American Army staff officers, headed by General Mark Clark, who made contact with pro-Ally French leaders. The other operation was to embark General Giraud secretly off the French coast, take him out to the open Mediterranean, then meet a flying boat which flew him to General Eisenhower's headquarters. No wonder they look pleased as they proudly display the Jolly Roger flag which attests to the success with which they carried out these difficult and dangerous tasks.

Invest Points in Beans
Good buy for your money these days is a pound of dry pea beans. High in protein, proportionately low in points, beans are the best bargain in the market now. For a pound of beans contains the makings of many a main course dish. Dishes with the same help and fillability as meat.

Say you start, for instance, with a pound of beans baked in an old-time crock. Sauce them down with condensed cream of tomato soup, and season with corn syrup, pungent mustard, and a dash of Worcestershire. Then bake till every bean is a tender, meaty nugget seething-rich with sauce and spice.

When the bean pot palls, tempt your family with this second-day choice: a mound of the same baked beans heaped on toast and covered with a nippy rarebit sauce. Then use up the leavings, if there are any still around, in a third main dish of Baked Bean Creole. This is a kind of hearty chowder to be served in deep bowls and spooned lustily for supper.

Plan ahead of time to use a pound of beans this way, and you will get the full good from every point invested.

Home-Style Baked Beans with Tomato Sauce

1½ cups water

place—
1 pint (1 lb.) dry pea beans.
Add—
2 teaspoons salt.
Bring to boiling point, cover and cook over medium heat for 2 hours. Place beans and liquid in bean pot.
Combine and pour over beans—

¾ cup condensed cream of tomato soup, undiluted
Pinch salt
¾ cup dark corn syrup
½ teaspoon prepared yellow mustard
¾ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Add during baking—
Water as needed.
Bake, covered, in a very slow oven (250 deg. F.) for 4½ hours. Uncover bean pot and bake ½ hour longer. To avoid mashing the beans do not stir while baking unless necessary.

THIS BUSINESS OF Living

BY SUSAN THAYER

FOOTACHES

If a woman who's lived in Germany for the past five years should suddenly be set down in a big American department store, she'd hardly believe her wondering eyes. She'd probably go around touching pieces of cloth, soft gloves, smooth powder boxes just to make sure they were real and not some cruel mirage. If she could go into one of our grocery stores, she would be amazed by the piles of fresh fruits and vegetables, the cheeses and butter and bread, and begin right away to plan the kind of meal she has wanted to give her family for many dreary months.

But to women in this country, used to the lavish output and wide choice which American manufacturers have given us, stores today begin to look a little bare. Even the 10-cent store isn't what it used to be with such stand-bys as hair pins and dishmops gone from its counters.

Grocery stores, of course, are very different from what they were a year ago with dozens of familiar brands missing from the shelves and limited supplies of many everyday foods. Department stores also are beginning to show the effects of the war.

So far, however, the lack of merchandise hasn't bothered most of us very much. We're surprised and a little disappointed, but we can still make the old chair do: get along without another pan, and perhaps pick up a second hand iron. But one of these days the "shoe of shortages" is really going to pinch. We're going to need something pretty desperately and not be able to get it anywhere.

Then, what? Are we going to feel sorry for ourselves and rail against industry that is devoting such a large part of its energy to war manufacturing? Or are we going to take these wartime inconveniences in our stride?

We've always had so much more than the women of Germany and the countries of occupied Europe; more, even than the women of our allied countries. And that "more" includes something other than material possessions.

For here in America we have hope—and faith. Hope that we'll go on to something better than we've ever known before once the war is over.

and greater faith than ever in the old American principles of the importance of the individual and his right to freedom and opportunity!

Final Rites Held For Mrs. Julia Ann Andrews

Funeral for Mrs. Julia Ann Andrews, 84, resident of Greensboro for the past 29 years, who died Monday at the home of her son, M. L. Andrews, 2508 Spruce street, where she had been residing was held at 4 p. m. Wednesday at Buffalo Presbyterian church by the pastor, Rev. A. P. Dixon, and burial followed in the church cemetery. Pallbearers were: Grant Coffey, Glenn Hawks, Clarence Southern, Howard Durham, William Herrin and Cary Brismor.

Mrs. Andrews, a native of Davidson county and a member of Pleasant Hill Methodist church there, was the widow of D. F. Andrews, Davidson county. She attended Buffalo Presbyterian church here until injuries she received in a fall last September confined her to bed.

Surviving are another son, M. C. Andrews, Washington; four daughters, Mrs. M. L. Leonard, Greensboro, Mrs. Ed Workman, Lexington, Mrs. Frank Lookbill and Mrs. C. F. Grubb, both of Thomasville; two brothers, Horace Jarrett, Thomasville, and Albert Jarrett, Davidson county; and two sisters, Johnnie Morris, both of Thomasville.

One Pound Of Meat Can Do Work Of Two With Careful Planning

That pound of meat, which only a short time ago served four persons if it were boneless, and only two if it contained bone, has now been stretched in both directions! Careful planning, originality and ingenuity, plus the addition of some good ingredients, will make a pound of meat serve at least double what it once would. Here's how to do it, says Jessie Alice Cline, home economist:

Take one pound of ground meat—beef, veal, pork or lamb, and add to it an equal measure of bread or cracker crumbs, cereal, grated raw potato, mashed potatoes or grated raw apple (especially good with sausage); then season well with grated onion (about one-fourth cup), one and one-half teaspoons salt and one-fourth teaspoon pepper; add enough liquid in the form of milk, water, tomato juice, catsup or soup stock to moisten the mixture and keep it from being dry.

A combination of the extenders may also be used: for instance, sausage is excellent stretched with a combination of grated apple and cracker crumbs.

This extended ground meat can then be made into patties and broiled, pan-broiled or baked in the oven; or they may be made into loaves and cooked as a roast.

Pot-roasts and roasts of all kinds can be extended with rice or bread dressings or stuffings, seasoned with celery, fresh mint, apples, and other fruits or vegetables which you like; or extend these meats with noodles; or extend a beef roast with Yorkshire pudding, or a pork roast with Batter Pudding (the American version of Yorkshire—made with corn meal).

Then, of course, don't forget the gravy, which is an excellent way of extending the delicious meat flavor.

In the making of stews, the amount of vegetables used in our meals, these wartime days may be increased, even doubled; or dumplings may be added to the stew to make it go further.

The Kitchen Front

WHEN eight points must be spent for one pound of cheese, leaving only eight for something else, it is well to caution the grocer lest he cut off more and you have to give up more points. And it is just as important to make every morsel of that cheese count in the diet. For cheese is a vital food—one of the group called "protective foods"—and is a complete protein.

The key to cooking dishes in which cheese is an ingredient is this: keep the gas flame low, whether for top burner or oven-cooking—because cheese needs low to moderate temperature; otherwise, if cooked at too high a temperature and overly long, it will become tough, leathery, and hard to digest. Cheese melts faster, too, if broken or cut into small pieces, before cooking. When possible, first blend it into a white sauce, for rarebit or macaroni and cheese.

The foods which can be used to extend cheese—breads and cereals—make it digest more readily. So, the macaroni not only makes the cheese go further, but it actually aids the digestion of it as well.

Effects Of Price Freeze On Manufacturing Is Discussed

The probable effects of the presidential price-freeze directive and the new manpower orders on manufacturing operations in the cotton textile industry were discussed by Dr. D. C. Murchison, President of the Cotton-Textile Institute, in a talk before the annual meeting of the Alabama Cotton Manufacturers held recently in Birmingham, Alabama.

The President's directive freezing all commodities and wages, he said, should probably have been made a year ago from the point of view of the cotton industry. "Coming at this time," he added, "it bears down with unequal effect upon different groups within the industry. This is due to the OPA policy of piecemeal determination of price ceilings.

"The hardship cases in the industry have been approached very slowly. During the past three months there has been a sharp upturn in the price of cotton and at the same time labor costs have increased greatly due to a higher percentage of absenteeism, a greater proportion of inexperienced workers and a high rate of labor turnover. Labor costs per unit of output as a result of these conditions have risen much more rapidly than the changes in the hourly wage rates suggest.

"Despite this trend OPA up to six weeks ago was acting and thinking in terms of further price reductions. Before a change of policy could be effected, the president's order was issued. It seems incontrovertible that certain yarns and fabrics are now on a non-profit basis and in some instances are being produced at less than cost. If these inequities are permitted to stand, the industry's war production efforts are bound to be handicapped. It must be remembered that every pound of yarn and every yard of goods produced represents a cash outlay on the part of the producer. Unless the receipts on sales replace cash an dprovidor for indirect costs of maintenance, depreciation, taxes and other items of overhead obviously the continuance of manufacturing is impossible. Happily, the language of the order gives reason to believe that adjustments will be allowed under certain circumstances. Consequently, we see no reason whatever why those particular divisions of the industry should not continue efforts for relief."

Commenting on the new selective service orders which point to the induction of every able-bodied man between 18 and 35 into the armed forces by the end of the year, except those deferred for essential industry and agriculture and for hardship reasons, Dr. Murchison said that by the end of the year the industry cannot hope to have more than 40 percent of the normal number of male workers in those age brackets on the payroll, including those exempted for physical defects and as hardship cases as well as the irreplaceable essential workers able to obtain renewal of their deferments.

The cotton industry, he said, as a result of a recent announcement by Frank L. Walton of the WPB is expecting a War Manpower Commission order declaring the industry in all its branches as essential industry. The major advantage of such an order, he explained, will be to discourage migration of workers to other industries since such changes in employment will not provide a greater degree of deferment than could be had in textiles. It will also aid in the procurement of supplies.

"The major source of replacements for the cotton textile industry is women and many of them, perhaps the majority, will be married women," he stated. "In many communities the labor scarcity will be so intense that the mills may find it to their advantage to promote or sponsor a nursery or kindergarten school in order that mothers of the younger children may be free to take employment. Several mills in the Carolinas have already done so. Another possible device is the use of the split shift which would permit four-hour employment for women who could not be away from home for longer periods.

Three Days Of Mud And KP Inspire Workers' Pledge

With the pledge "No American fighting man will ever want for fighting equipment as long as we have breath and brawn in our bodies", 250 shop committeemen from key war plants in the Detroit area returned to their jobs after three days' active training with seasoned troops of the 83rd and 92nd Divisions at Camp Atterbury, Ind.

At Camp Atterbury the union leaders took part in every type of military activity, including KP duty. They trudged through ankle deep mud in biting winds, lumbered over obstacle courses, wriggled belly-flat in practice attacks and wormed their way through barbed wire. Two, who failed to appear in time for formations, voluntarily agreed to peel potatoes as punishment.

From the time the 83rd Division band met the group at the station until the last delegate boarded the return train the most cordial relations were maintained between the Detroit "rookies" and the regular troops. Most of the unionists were calling their bunkmates by their first names after the first evening.

Major General Frank W. Milburn,

commander of the 83rd, authorized each of the visitors to take home the black and gold sleeve insignia of the division as a token of honorary membership.

Responding for the union leaders, Walter P. Reuther, United Automobile Workers' vice president, promised that the workers of Detroit would set themselves the goal of matching the work and sweat of the two divisions with which the delegation trained.

Live ammunition flew around the heads of the visitors as they swung across deep gullies on rope and wire bridges, grappled with bayonet-armed adversaries in hand-to-hand combat and nosed their way through muck-filled tunnels. Union-built tanks and tank destroyers advanced through barages laid down by union-built cannon, and tank mines burst near enough to shake the ground on which the delegates stood.

A picture of what the real thing is like was given by Major General Jonathan W. Anderson, who has just returned from North Africa. He assured the unionists that American soldiers overseas regarded their arms and equipment as the world's finest. Colonel A. Robert Ginsburgh, aide to the Under Secretary of War, conveyed Mr. Patterson's greetings.

The visit was arranged through the Industrial Services Division, Bureau of Public Relations, of the War Department.

Surgical Dressings Room Open On Wednesday Afternoon

The Proximity Red Cross Surgical Dressings room will be open on Wednesday afternoons from 2 to 4 o'clock in addition to the regular Monday night hours. This will give more of the women in the village an opportunity to give some time to this important work. There is hardly a family in Proximity who does not have some loved one in the U. S. service and yet only a small per cent have given any time at all to the Surgical Dressings room.

On Monday night, Mrs. Max Payne and Mrs. Fred Sarles of the Greensboro Red Cross were present. Mrs. Sarles spoke briefly, demonstrating the new "head dress" required by Washington Headquarters. It is very simple and easily made and the entire group on Monday night are planning to have theirs by next Monday. Those present were: Mesdames H. B. Ritter, C. S. Becker, J. D. Scott, R. C. Goforth, J. D. Whitt, Stanley Bumgarner, A. B. Candler, J. T. Carruthers, Horace Pennington, H. J. Elkins, Frank Thornburg, Woodrow Inman, W. H. Oakes, and Misses Anna Motz, Millicent Maness, Phoebe Richards and Frances Holman.

W. O. Baby Clinic

Diana Hughes Staley, Ann Marie Kapps, and Jessie Care Gray, Jr., made their first trip to the Clinic Wednesday. Others present were: Dowell Gillie, Sue Culbreth, Doris Lee Garrett, James Gregory, Tommie Michael, Julia Trogdon Pickard, Linda Murray, Clarence K. Pinkleton, Norma Sue Apple, Jean Southern, John W. Layton, Delphine Hutchinson, Beckie Ann McDaniel, Norman Elder, James Lester Parker, Joan Wrenn, James Leo Foster, Charles and Robert Rhew, Cynthia Roberson and Janice Vaughan.
